Technical Analysis

Strategy: KSE-100 closed at 177,696.51, gaining 373.73 points, with the index holding within the recent consolidation range. The benchmark tested an intraday high of 178,042.79 but failed to sustain above the 178,000 level, keeping 178,000 to 180,000 as the immediate resistance zone. On the downside, support is visible around 177,000, followed by 175,500 to 174,500, where the broader trend remains supported. The index is trading around its short term averages, indicating a lack of clear directional momentum, while the Bollinger Bands remain relatively contained, suggesting consolidation. A sustained break above 180,000 would improve the outlook and open room towards 182,000 to 183,000, whereas a break below 175,500 would weaken the setup. Overall, the view remains cautiously positive, with accumulation on weakness preferred while 175,500 holds.
