Technical Analysis

Strategy: KSE-100 opened on a negative note and remained in the red zone throughout the session, closing at 176,042.98 with a loss of 1,580.89 points. The index attempted an intraday recovery after testing the day's low of 175,631 but failed to sustain above the 176,500 - 177,000 resistance zone, indicating that selling pressure remains dominant despite buyers defending lower levels.

Immediate support is placed around 175,500 - 175,100, while stronger support is seen near the 174,700-174,400 region. On the upside, the index needs to reclaim 177,000, followed by 178,500, to improve the short-term outlook. Until then, the market is likely to remain under pressure, although any dip towards key support levels may provide selective accumulation opportunities in fundamentally strong stocks.
